

Shoosmiths Presentation

Speaker

Nick Lloyd is RoSPA (Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents) Road Safety Manager for England. He has over 25 years of road safety experience having previously been Head of Road Safety at Staffordshire County Council where he was responsible for Road Safety Education, Accident Analysis, Speed Camera, Local Safety Schemes and Sustainable Travel programmes.

Since leaving Staffordshire, Nick has worked within the Charity sector at Sustrans and RoSPA.

He has worked extensively with businesses to support them in introducing and monitoring Occupational Road Safety policies and practices.

Presentation Title: Is work related road safety the elephant in the room?

This will cover:

- Do we have a problem?
- Is managing occupational road risk a priority for businesses? And what progress has been made in the last 15 years?
- The risks if things go wrong?
- How to put policies and procedures in place including grey fleet vehicles
- Advice and support provided by RoSPA
- How does your company compare to others in your industry?
- Spotting the early signs of poor driver behaviour
- How can technology help you manage the risk?

Description of what members will gain from attending.

Members will gain:

- An overview of the current situation
- The key risk and how to manage these
- Putting together policies and procedures and evaluating their impact
- Support that is available to help them
- Using technology to reduce the risks associated with work based road safety
